DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

Claims 1-9 are rejected under 35 USC §102(b)/103(a) as anticipated or obvious over Yasuda, US Patent No. 3,682,696. This rejection is set forth in the prior Office action mailed on November 29, 2002.

Response to Arguments

2. Applicant's arguments filed on July 18, 2003 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Applicants argue that Yasuda does not teach a dissipative layer, but an antistatic paper in which an antistatic agent is admixed with the papermaking pulp. This is not convincing, because the claims do not define the layer to be something different than a web or a sheet and that's what the reference discloses. Yasuda teaches a web or paper that can be inherently used as a dissipative layer, since it has all the characteristics of claimed layer. Note that a preamble is not a limitation if it merely states a purpose or intended use and the remainder of the claim completely defines the invention. See Diversitech Corp. vs Century Steps Inc., 7 USPQ 2d 1315 (Fed. Cir. 1988).

The reference, Yasuda, teaches all the limitations of the claims as claimed, i.e., a paper forming substance, the fiber and papermaking additives, and an additional additive, same as the one(s) claimed. Note also that the reference teaches that the additive is an antistatic agent, i.e., it has static dissipative properties.

In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
